FOR RELEASE

Dr. Lester Carr, Associate Professor of Psychology and newly appointed Dean of the Summer School program at Salve Regina College has announced the following plans.

Salve Regina College is presently involved in a major expansion of its summer school. This will include introduction of a broad array of courses offered during the regular six week summer session and the establishment of three day to one week institutes. In this newly developed model, the summer school will function from June 1 to September 1. The summer campus of Salve is slated to become a nationally recognized summer center for a variety of institutes in the area of human resources and the creative arts. Under three day to one week institutes in the areas of rehabilitation courses, mental health and art therapy are being planned for this summer. It is expected that these institutes will attract participants and students from all over the New England area as well as other parts of the country.

Salve Regina College with its new expansion is in the position to provide leadership as a nationally recognized center for human resources and creative arts institutes during the summer.

The summer school shown in terms of courses offered and planned institutes will attempt to utilize an interdisciplinary approach to education.
